Study Title: Identifying Gaps in AAC Services for Children: Perspectives from Speech-Language Pathologists

Western University researchers are inviting speech-language pathologists (SLPs)/speech and language therapists (SLTs) working with children and youth in general practice contexts (e.g., those with varied populations in treatment centres, school boards, private practice, hospitals) and specialized AAC clinics to complete a 30 minute survey about their experiences being trained for and using augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) in practice.
