PROF-HO-25-00126

The Feuerstein Method, created by world renowned cognitive psychologist Reuven Feuerstein, is a process-based educational approach that emphasises "learning how to learn". This method unlocks latent intellectual potential by teaching individuals' critical cognitive strategies often overlooked in traditional education.

Feuerstein's Early Childhood Curriculum is a structured framework for early and elementary education. It engages young children in problem solving while fostering cognitive, learning, and emotional skills. This curriculum equips children with the tools to form meaningful social relationships and contribute positively to society.

A key element of the IE Basic program, which includes 11 instruments, focusing on fundamental cognitive strategies. These activities enhance children's basic concepts, emerging cognitive functions like self-regulation, and intrinsic motivation in group or individual settings.

FIE Basic Program Workshop is divided into 2 modules: FIE Basic-1 and FIE Basic-2. Each workshop covers theory to practice. The former covers first 5 instruments while the second covers the remaining 6 instruments.
